Will remain in current locations; (c) C2. Will remain in 1 Arty Bde (d) Role. Will retain MLRS as a Reserve (Div Fires) Regt and provide support to warfighting at scale and (e) Structure. Subject to further planning the Regimental liability will be reduced to better reflect a modern expeditionary division. The Regimental structure of 4x Sub Units and an RHQ will remain the same. A2020R implementation offers a great opportunity for the Regiment to secure its position within the UK ORBAT and to continue to develop and refine its knowledge as Deep Fires experts. The Army continues to be an integrated force of Regular and Reserves, forged through successful pairing mechanisms and the re-designation of a Regular GS (Div Fires) Regiment is welcome news.”

- Joint Service Signal Unit (Digby), RAF Digby (SSU (D) is a MOD sponsored unit whose mission is to provide operational support to the development of specialist communication information systems. JSSU (D) is the largest of several Joint Service Signal Units, and as its name implies it comprises personnel from all 3 UK and US Armed Forces, supported by specialist civilian staff and contractors. However, the RAF and the Army together make up most of the 500-strong complement. In carrying out its mission, JSSU (D) operates both at home and on deployments overseas. In this regard, the unit carries out its own military and specialist training which ensures that individuals earmarked for such deployments are well prepared and able to look after themselves in the field. JSSU (D) links with other national and international organisations, such as the US military, NATO, and other government departments, to ensure that communications capability is consistent between all users.). Also stationed in Cyprus
